A New Flexible Material ...That offers REAL Flexibility

We can now offer a new type of flexible denture that does away with several of the drawbacks of conventional flexible dentures. The material in question is called LustreFlex. Unlike conventional flexible materials LustreFlex can bond with itself so relines and additions no longer impact the flexibility and durability of the denture.

The only real difference between LustreFlex and conventional flexible material is LustreFlex is not quite as flexible. In most instances this makes no real difference and indeed can actually be a benefit as some flexible dentures are made too flexible causing problems with movement and stability.

Can Be Used For Unbreakable Dentures

No longer just for partials, LustreFlex can be used for full dentures due to its opacity, strength and highly aesthetic appearance. This gives you the ability to offer, beautiful, unbreakable dentures for any situation.

Best Ever For Patient Comfort

LustreFlex is biocompatible and can be used for patients who have monomer allergies. LustreFlex dentures fit perfectly in the mouth as the material has almost zero shrinkage. Another advantage is that the major connectors are more stable, which is obviously better for the patient's ridges as the denture will not create undue pressure.

Easy To Reline, Repair & Add To

As mentioned, LustreFlex has the ability to bond to itself and can therefore be relined, added to and repaired, without compromising the monomer free, flexibility and biocompatibility of the denture.

No Extra Cost

The cost for a LustreFlex denture is exactly the same as a conventional flexible denture. This gives you maximum 'flexibility' when deciding on what restoration to provide your patient. If you require maximum flexibility chose Flexite, if versatility is more important than maximum flexibility chose LustreFlex.
